s spirituous liquid, of a very agreeable acomutic to flavor is strong and very agreeable to the pulate. ometre. By the distillation in a balaium maria agreeable aroma completely colorless and transpar ent, which marked 90 degrees in Cartier's alcoholic weigher, or 70 degrees 5 hundredth on Gay Luss id's alcometre; and which represented as a whol 7 per cent of aromatic Schiedam schnapps subject to distillation in the retort. This liquid did not call the transparency of the distilled water in mixing it with the same, and its agreeable scoms is doubtless due to a very trifling amount of an exsential oil inseparable from alcohol-From the remainder of the distillation which was left in the roters, I have obtained, through evaporation in a vapor bath, a substance of a yellowish brown color, clear, and having a bitter aste which is not disagreeable, and which afterwards becomes aromatic and leaves the mouth perfumed with that fragrance peculiar to the vanilla. I am inclined to believe that to this bitter and acomatic extractive substance, soluble in water and alcohol, the medicinal properties which are attri buted to this gin are due. I have not found in Udolpho Woife's accuratio schiedam schnapps any nineral or organic substance other han the extractive one already named and the aromatic one obtained by distillation. Finally, Udolpho Wolfe's aromatic Schiedam schnapps consists simply of an aromatic alcohol of 20 degrees of graduation in Cartier's alcoholic weigher, and of an extractive bitter aromatic substance, which perhaps, is medicinal; and, on account of its not containing any matter injurious to the health, as well as for its odor and good flavor-a fact which no doubt arises from the choice substances employed in its manufacture, and from the peculiar manner of its distillation, it should, in my opinion, be preferred to all the Holland, Belgic and German gins which are found in this Island which it has been my busi ness to examine. These gins as I have often prove | FRENCH WHITE ZINK PAINT. t, exhale a disagreeable odor, and have a more or iess disagreeable flavor, some of them having left as was the case with the superior gin from the distillery of Mr. Henry Deetjon (of Bremen), as resid um after evaporation by steam, a substance almost insipidand very triffingly aromatic, with flavor of vanilla, but in no wise with the delicious bitter and aromatic flavor of that of Udolpho Wolfe; and others, such as that Inbelled "Genuine Samaritan," "Extra superior" Messrs Tracher have furnished, me a very small quantity of a greenish substance, of barsh metalic taste and very disagreeable, which extractive organic matter was mixed with a salt of copper, with signs of iron, owing perhaps, to a bad vstam of distillation
